

Online Resources for Professional and Academic Research Papers

Thousands of references are available online, either in full or in part. If you need help getting started, try these sources:

Lund University Libraries' Directory of Open Access Journals

This site provides open access to more than 400,000 peer-reviewed and scholarly journal articles in many languages. The site owners request that users become members, but membership is not required to access most resources. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

- Virginia Polytechnical Institute and State University's Journal of Technology Education

This material is freely available for academic use through a Creative Commons license. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

- Maryland Public Television and Johns Hopkins University Center for Technology in Education's Thinkport: "Think Technology: National News"

This site provides links to recent news topics that are relevant to classroom assignments for grades K - 12. Full access to the site requires registration; however, many materials are available without registering. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

- John Wiley & Sons' Interscience Journals

This site provides links to PDF-formatted versions of scientific journal articles, as well as summaries and article excerpts. Some publications are available only through a subscription; certain others must be purchased. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

PsychInnoVations.com's Mostly Free Online Journals, Articles and Searches for Mental Health Professionals

This is a vast repository of resources for those writing in the mental health field. The site also provides links to specialized search engines. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

Stanford University's HighWire Press

"The largest archive of free full-text science on Earth," Stanford University Libraries' HighWire site provides hundreds of links to current and archival scholarly journals in medicine and related sciences. Access to many publications requires registration. Please respect the copyright and terms of use displayed on this webpage.

Lippincott's NursingCenter.com: "Journal Articles"

The information available through this site is intended primarily for use by nurses and other health care professionals. Terms of Use for this site: <http://www.nursingcenter.com/about/termofuse.asp>

